

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

TO THE
Most Honourable

MY LORD MARQUIS,

HAVING by long labour and patience endeavoured to illustrate the Monuments in the Churches and Churchyards of my native parish, I requested permission to dedicate the result of my labours to your lordship, and I humbly and gratefully acknowledge that permission being granted.

I have the honour to be,

Your Lordship's most obedient and most humble servant,

P R E F A C E .

THE nature and design of a book of this kind is so obvious that it does not need an introduction, and not being willing to subject myself to comments upon the vanity of authorship, or compilation, I offer this, my first essay, to an indulgent public. Having seen, with deep regret, the wholesale sacrifice to the god of mammon of those grounds which have been consecrated by Bishops as the resting-places of all that remained of our mortal bodies, I have endeavoured, by the employment of my spare hours, to save from the wholesale destruction which is now going on, some of the inscriptions of the noted families buried in my native parish.

I am fully aware of the shortcomings of this volume, but have spared no labour to make it as perfect as possible; and although some errors may have crept in, I offer it as a labour of love of many years.

I have to express my sincere thanks to the Rev. W. Arrowsmith, M.A., Vicar of Old St. Pancras, for his kindness in affording me unlimited access to the church and churchyard of Old S. Pancras, for the preservation of which he has fought, with time and money, against those who would have sold it to a railway company. I am also indebted to the works of the Rev. S. Lysons, in assisting me to know whose stones to search for. My thanks are also due to Mr. W. Griggs, of the India Museum Depôt, for the photo-lithographs by his patent process. My obligations are also due to the kind friends who have so willingly subscribed, and thus enabled me to present this, my first volume of the Epitaphs of Middlesex, to the public.

INTRODUCTION.

S. Pancras, in Middlesex.

THE old parish church of S. Pancras is situated in the Old S. Pancras Road, running from Battle Bridge, or King's Cross, in front of the Great Northern Railway, to Kentish Town, through what was known as the King's Road, and coming out at the Castle Tavern, which stood at the corner of Water Lane.

It is supposed to have been erected in the twelfth century. In the records belonging to the Dean and Chapter of S. Paul's, there is noticed a visitation made to this church in the year 1251, wherein is stated "that it had a little belfry, a good stone font for baptisms, and a small marble stone to carry the Pax."

Weever, in his "Funeral Monuments," speaks of a wondrous ancient monument in this church, by tradition said to belong to the family of Robert Eve and Laurentia, his sister, daughter of Francis, son of Thomas Eve, clerk of the crown. The family of Eve were of great antiquity in this parish. In the year 1252, King Henry III. granted leave to Thomas Ive to enclose a portion of the highway adjoining to his mansion at Kentish Town. On the north wall is a monument of Purbeck marble, with an elliptical arch, ornamented with quatrefoils, to the family of "Gray," of Gray's Inn. The inscription and arms are obliterated.

The rectory of S. Pancras was valued at thirteen marks per annum in 1327. It appears by the visitation of the church in 1251 that the vicar had all the small tithes, a pension of £5 per annum out of the great tithes, four acres of glebe, and a vicarage house near the church.

Richard Cloudesley, of Islington, by will, dated 13th January, 1517, 9 Henry VIII., gave as follows: "Item—I give and bequeath to the Church of S. Pancras, two torches, price xivd., and two poor men of the same parish two gowns, price the piece vis. viiiid. Item—I give and bequeath to the priest of the church aforesaid xxd., to ye intent yt he shall pray for me by name openly in his church every Sunday, and to pray his parishioners to pray for me and forgive me, as I forgive them and all the world."

From the certificates of the commissioners for dissolving colleges and chantries, in the first year of the reign of King Edward VI., it appears that John Marrant gave unto the parson and churchwardens of

S. Pancras, for the intent that they should keep an obit* yearly, for ever, four acres of meadow ground, called Kilbornecroft, valued in 1547 at sixteen shillings per annum, whereof, at the obit, twelve shillings was to be given to the priest, and four shillings to the poor in recreation.

In the inventory of the ornaments, jewels, and bells belonging to the parish church of S. Pancras in the Fields, Kentish Town, made the 12th of March, 3 Edward VI., mention is made of "a hearse cloth of sattyn of Brydges, and four standards for the hearse of latten."

Phillis Oldernshaw, wife of William Oldernshaw, gent., of Tottenhall Court, in this parish, gave, the 9th day of February, A.D. 1627, a black cloth for ever, to be laid on the poor deceased people of this parish, without fee, and all others to pay for the use of it to the churchwardens.

Mrs. Rose Knightly, of Green Street, Kentish Town, gave, the 25th day of September, 1632, to this parish for ever, a fair gilt plate, to be only used for the bread at the Holy Sacrament, in the same parish.

At a vestry held 12th July, 1721, it was agreed and ordered that a new pall should be bought at the joint charge of the minister and the parish, ac-

* The anniversary of any person's death was called the obit, and to observe such day with prayers and alms, or other commemoration, was called keeping the obit.

ording to the custom of this parish, and that the fee for this new pall should be as usual, viz., ten shillings for a foreigner and five shillings for a parishioner; and that the fee for the old pall, for the use thereof, should be half of the other; that the profits of these palls should be equally divided between the minister and the parish; and that the clerk, for his taking care, carrying, and bringing home of the same (the palls being kept at his house) shall have a shilling out of every ten or five shilling fee; and that all foreigners shall, as much as possible, be obliged either to use one of these palls or pay the fee aforesaid. In pursuance of the above order, a new pall was bought at the joint expense of the minister (the Rev. E. De Chair*) and the parish, and cost £17. 10s. 6d.

The vicarage is rated in the king's books at £9 per annum; in 1650 it was valued at £28; an augmentation of £50 per annum was at that time voted by the committee.

The earliest date of the register of baptisms and marriages is 1660; that of burials, 1668. It is to be feared that for several years the registers, particularly those of baptisms, are incomplete.

Average of baptisms from 1660 to 1668, $13\frac{7}{8}$, and of burials 11.

* He was Canon of S. Paul's, and presented to the Rectory of Coulsdon, Surrey, 1737.

In the sixteenth century, Norden, in his account of the parishes of Middlesex, describes it "as standing solitary, as utterly forsaken, old, and weather-beaten, which for the antiquity thereof is thought not to yield to S. Paul's, in London. Folks from the hamlet of Kentish Town now and then visit it, but not often, having a chapel of their own. When, however, they have a corpse to be interred, they are forced to leave the same within this forsaken church or churchyard, where it resteth as secure against the day of resurrection as if it lay in stately S. Paul's."

It was usual formerly to perform divine service at this church only on the first Sunday in each month; at other times in Kentish Town chapel. This arrangement was sufficiently convenient before the great increase of buildings on the south side of the parish. Divine service is now held at S. Pancras three times every Sunday. The present highly-respected vicar is the Rev. W. Arrowsmith, M.A.

The old church remained in much the same shape as when seen by Norden (with the exception of thorough renovation and slight alterations) until 1848, when it was altered and partly rebuilt, from the design and under the direction of Mr. A. D. Gough, architect, of Lancaster Place. The old church had no galleries, and the accommodation was limited to about 120 persons. By the enlargement and reconstruction, sitting room is now provided for 500 persons. The exterior is entirely faced with rag stone, principally obtained in rough unhewn masses from the old tower, removed to effect an elongation of the church, so that no new stone of this description was required; but the old stone which had existed for many centuries in the fabric was re-worked and re-applied to the entire casing of the structure throughout. The ornamental details are executed in Caen stone, entirely new.

The arrangement of the church, as now restored, consists of an elongation westward; a new tower occupying a central position on the south side of that part which constituted the old church; and a stair turret in a corresponding position in that, which is entirely new. The west front and tower are the main features of the structure. Of the interior, its fittings are those of the old structure, retained, altered, and adapted to the present church. The oak carvings of Gibbon's time have been preserved and applied, the whole being treated as the furniture of the church rather than as part of the structure itself. The lower part of the tower opens into the cross gangway of the church, and is applied to the purposes of a baptistry. The organ occupies a position in the west gallery. In the western gallery are introduced two stages, one slightly elevated above the other, the latter being appropriated to children only. Narrow galleries on the north and south sides are so arranged as to afford further accommodation, and, receding towards the east end leave the pulpit and reading-stand on either side, and the chancel open and unobstructed. The windows of the chancel are entirely filled in with stained glass. The east window consists of three compartments, the subjects being the crucifixion in the centre, and effigies of S. Peter and S. Paul, on either side respectively; and on the windows of the north and south sides of the chancel are representations of the conversion of S. Paul, and his appearance before Agrippa. The small circular windows have the emblem of the Trinity, the Agnus Dei, the Alpha and the Omega; and the sacred monogram is emblazoned on the stone work within the head of the chancel arch. The large wheel window in the west front is also filled in with stained glass.

An old altar stone, found during the progress of the works, has been preserved and inlaid, slightly raised above the chancel flooring. The many sepulchral monuments create great interest, having been carefully restored and refixed as nearly as possible in their original positions. The restoration and fittings cost between two and three thousand pounds.

The churchyard was closed in 1850 by Act of Parliament.

It is lamentable to see the dilapidated state of the monuments in this ground, belonging to wealthy and well-known families, which for a few pounds might be restored and made a credit to the churchyard.

In 1868 the Midland Railway Company made a cutting through the churchyard and a viaduct over, which was strenuously opposed by the Rev. W. Arrowsmith, M.A., but unsuccessfully, to the lasting disgrace of all concerned in this sacrifice of God's Acre.

* Woodhead was a native of Yorkshire. He was in his day the great champion of the Roman Catholic religion, in defence of which he wrote a great number of tracts, most of which were printed after his death at the private press of his friend Obadiah Walker, Master of the College of which he himself had been a Fellow. He died at Hoxton, where he had for some years led a very retired life, instructing children in the Roman Catholic religion.

* Obadiah Walker, clerk, buried Feb. 2, 1699. Obadiah Walker was born at Wosperdale in Yorkshire, and received his education at University College, Oxford, of which he afterwards became Master. In the year 1687, by virtue of letters patent from King James, he set up a press, for the avowed purpose of printing books against the Reformed Religion. The patent specifies the names of the books (many of which were written by his deceased friend Abraham Woodhead), and exempts him from any penalties to which he might be subject by the statutes against Popery. The number of copies to be published of each work is limited to 20,000 within the year. He procured also other letters patent, by which he and some fellows of his college were excused from attending the public service of the Church. Under the sanction of this authority, he opened a chapel for Mass within the walls of the college. Upon the arrival of William the Third, following the example of his royal patron, he abdicated his headship, and went to London, where he passed the remainder of his days, and died in the month of January, 1699, aged 86. He was author of a treatise on education, &c., and was buried near the grave of his friend, Abraham Woodhead.

JOHN ERNEST GRABE, D.D. Buried Nov. 9, 1711.*

* A learned Divine, born at Königsberg, in Prussia, in the year 1666. He received his education at that place, where his father was professor of divinity and history. Having determined to quit the Lutheran religion on account of some points of conscience, he hesitated for some time in his choice, and at length determined to embrace that of the Church of England; for which purpose he came to this country in 1695, bringing with him very strong recommendations to the King, who assigned him a pension of £100 per annum, to enable him to pursue his studies. He soon afterwards entered into priest's orders in our Church. He published "Spicilegium SS. Patrum, or the Lesser Works of the Fathers and Heretics of the Three First Centuries," &c., &c. There is a monument to this eminent Divine in Westminster Abbey, with the following inscription, which has occasioned it to be said that he was buried there:—

In ecclesia parochialis S^ti Pancratii prope Londinum
jacet JOH. ERNESTUS GRABIUS, S. T. P.

gente Boruffis; affectu nostras; eruditionis famâ, illustratissime antiquæ ecclesiæ monumentis per univ^{er}sam orbem Christianum celeberrimus. Qui cum in deterioris sæculi fæcem incidisset, ut a depravato ecclesiæ statu animum averteret, in auream illam ætatem frequenti cogitatione remeavit, et cum priscis patribus familiaritatem coluit jucundissimam. Horum exemplis accensus, eâ Christianorum omnium virtutum præcellentiâ enituit, ut etiam inter splendidissima primorum sæculorum lumina eluxisse potuisset. Ecclesiam primævam Apostolicam summâ veneratione profecutus est; Anglicanæ utpote quæ ab eâ minimùm decesserat proximos honores detulit. Hanc domo, hanc patriâ, quas mortalium nemo magis dilexit, chariorem habuit; in hujus gremium se recipi vehementer gestiit; ab hujus finu ad ecclesiam primitivorum qui conscripti sunt in cœlis lætus emigravit tertio die Nov. 1711, ætatis 46. Ne publicum deesset testimonium eximii illius honoris quo hospitem adeo illustrem coluit Britannia, Robertus Comes de Oxon et Comes Mortimer pro spectato suo in literas et literatos amore cœnotaphium hoc posuit.

About two o'clock on the following morning his remains were interred in this grave-yard, but a few nights afterwards the body was taken up, for the use of the surgeons, as it was supposed. He first published a collection of essays upon various subjects, also a translation of Moreri's Great Dictionary, &c., &c. In 1713 he was consecrated a Bishop by the Non-Jurors. His spring of life was such as should have been Adroit and gay, unvex'd by care or spleen ;
His summer's manhood open, fresh, and fair ;
His virtue strict, his manners debonnaire ;
His autumn rich with wisdom's goodly fruit,
Which every varied appetite might suit.
In polish'd circles dignified with ease,
And less desirous to be pleas'd than please.
Grave with the serious ; with the comic gay ;
Warm to advise, yet willing to obey.
True to the fond affections of the heart,
He play'd the friend, the husband, parent's part.
What needs there more to eternize his fame,
What monument more lasting than his name?

* This well-known writer was born in 1759. The place of her birth is uncertain, but is supposed to have been at a farm in Epping Forest. At an early age she engaged herself in the occupation of tuition, for which she was eminently qualified. Unhappily, her sentiments on religious subjects were most exceptional, and she had imbibed principles hostile to that system which has been long established for the regulation of civil society. It was well, therefore, that after a few years she declined the employment of tuition, and confined herself to her pen. Having a contempt for the institution of marriage, she entered into a connection with Mr. Imlay, an American merchant, whom she met at Paris in 1792, and made with him a tour in the north of Europe, of which she gave an account in an interesting volume of letters in 1796. In consequence of the desertion of this gentleman, she resolved upon destroying herself (having failed in the attempt a few months before); she went by water from London Bridge to Putney, and deliberately jumped off Putney Bridge in the month of October, 1795. She was baffled in her attempt this time; her clothes having buoyed her up, she was rescued by some watermen. In July, 1796, Mrs. Wollstonecraft took a house at Somers Town, in the parish of St. Pancras, not long after which she formed a connection with the well-known author of "Political Justice," &c. ments were perfectly in unison, and they both had so thorough a contempt for the rite of marriage, that it was only in consequence of her pregnancy, and the apprehension that she might incur that exclusion from the society of many valuable and esteemed friends which custom awards in cases of this kind, that they were induced to comply with that ceremony. In April, 1797, Mr. and Mrs. Godwin took a house in the Polygon, Somers Town, where on the 10th of September following Mrs. Godwin died, eleven days after having given birth to a daughter. She was the mother of the future wife of Percy Bysshe Shelley, the poet.

Ah! shade revered, this frail memorial take,
'Tis all, alas! thy sorrowing child can make,
On this faint stone, to mark thy parent worth,
And claim the spot that holds thy sainted earth.
This clay-cold shrine, the corpse enshrouded here,
This holy hillock bath'd with many a tear;
These kindred flow'rs that o'er thy bosom grow,
Fed by the precious dust that lies below;
E'en these rude branches that embrace thy head,
And the green sod that forms thy sacred bed,
Are richer, dearer to this filial heart,
Than all the monuments of proudest art.
Yet, yet a little, and thy child shall come
To join a mother in this decent tomb.
This only spot of all the world is mine,
And soon my dust, sweet shade! shall mix with thine.

A man eminently gifted by nature and learning :
He employed those talents in promoting the glory of God, and the good of any fellow-creature without

For he prayed, wept, and felt for all.

That his life was the best comment of his writings ;

As the benevolence they breathe was enlivened and

Recommended by his example,

Even in the moment when he was called to Receive the reward of both.

And pitying rescued thee from earthly pain,

In God I'll trust, and through my Saviour's might,
I hope to meet thee in the realms of light.

WILLIAM BORROWS,
Died at Kingston, Jamaica,
March 9th, 1816,
Aged 21.

How vain to trust in blooming youth and health,
How vain the best laid plans for fame or wealth;
By friends approved he left his native land,
Scarce two months had he reach'd that distant strand,
When struck by fever's pestilential breath,
Th' aspiring youth in five days yields his breath.

Sacred
To the Memory of MAURICE MARGAROT,
Who died November 11th, 1815,
Aged 67 years.

In 1793 he was chosen a delegate,
from the London Corresponding Society
to the British Convention,
to promote a just reform
in the Commons House of Parliament, and although his conduct in that assembly
was able, legal, and upright, still he was, under the ministry of William Pitt, in 1794, condemned by the Court of Justiciary in Edinburgh to 14 years' transportation to New South Wales.

Expatriated by that severe sentence
He was, with four other martyrs,
to the cause of freedom,
Fitzgerald, Muir, Palmer, & Skirvinge,
doomed to unparalleled sufferings,
which he endured with the magnanimity of conscious rectitude and unsullied honour.
He alone survived in 1810,
and returned to his native land
injured in health, ruined in fortune, yet still esteemed and revered
by his enlightened fellow-citizens.

Also to the Memory of His wife ELIZABETH,
Who died Feb. 14th, 1841,
aged 77 years.
She heroically participated in all the misfortunes of her husband, and during his unmerited exile
solaced him with the tenderest affection.
She was characterised by every female virtue.
She lived beloved,
and in full possession of her mental faculties
she died, sincerely regretted
by all who knew her.

Miss SARAH JORDAN,
Departed this life Oct^r 10th, 1815,
Aged 17 years and eight months.
Alas! she's gone in nature's prime,
She withered like a rose,
That's cropt before it scarce had time,
Its beauties to disclose.

To the Memory of ANNA MARIA
FITZGERALD, Widow of Major-General Fitzgerald,
Many years in the Service of Portugal,
Who terminated her mortal career
on the first day of March of the year MDCCCXV.
Esteemed by all her acquaintances
For her amiable and engaging manners,
She is now lamented by her afflicted friends.
Dying in the sentiments in which she had lived,
She exemplified in her last moments
The salutary maxim that a good death is the Certain recompense of a virtuous life.

Sacred to thy memories, oh! parents dear,
This stone thy children have erected here.
A tribute of affection due from them to you,
Whom ye nourish'd, cherish'd, and protected too.
Whose welfare was your anxious hope and care,
For whom you watch'd to guide from every snare,
And taught the Lord to fear, and in His mercy trust,
To pass through life plain, honestly, and just,
As ye did do, and by our merits rise,
Respected and esteemed as ye were in yere lives,
That you may the reward good parents share,
Shall be your children's never-ceasing prayer.

Claim praise, here, with the husband of her youth
And age, and sorrowing offspring, praise extend.
Grief has few words, affliction must be borne,
The Christian worships, tho' the man must mourn.

Died 16th May, 1839, aged 56 years.
Her truly Christian piety enabled her to bear
a long protracted illness with patience and fortitude, until it pleased the Almighty Disposer of all human events in recompense to her sufferings in this world to call her to the mansions of the blest.
She obeyed the summons with meekness and resignation,
and commending her spirit
into the hands of her blessed Redeemer
she departed this life in the fervent hope that her devotions in this world would end in the hallelujahs of heaven.
This monument was erected as a mark of the most affectionate respect for her memory and as an humble and very inadequate tribute to her inestimable worth.

* He was the son of an ancient family at Tonnerre, in Burgundy, where he was born October 2, 1728. He was educated under his father's roof, and at the age of thirteen was sent to the College Mazarin, at Paris. Having finished his studies, he was introduced to Louis XV. by Prince de Conti, who presented him with a cornetcy of dragoons. Soon after this he received an appointment in the office of Monsieur Bertier de Savigny, Intendant of the Generalité of Paris. Having displayed considerable ability, he was rapidly raised to a position of distinction and received the Croix de St. Louis. Having been appointed Charge d'Affaires, and afterwards Minister Plenipotentiary to the British Court, he was not allowed to enjoy the distinction long, an unfortunate quarrel with Comte de Guerchy suspended his ministerial functions, and was the cause of his future misfortunes throughout his life. He died in Millman Street, at the south-east boundary of this parish.

Governor WALL, buried January, 1802.*

* At the end of January, 1802, the mortal remains of Governor Wall were interred in the churchyard of St. Pancras. No stone marks the resting-place of this unfortunate man, who was tried at the Old Bailey on January 20, 1802, and found guilty of the murder of Benjamin Armstrong, by having inflicted upon him 800 lashes with a rope, at the garrison at Gorree, upon the coast of Africa, July, 1782. He was apprehended under a warrant from the Privy Council, in 1784, and was sent to Reading Goal, from which he escaped, and fled to the Continent. He remained in exile for twenty years, occasionally visiting this country. He came finally to England in 1797. In January, 1802, he wrote to the Secretary of State to say he was ready to give himself up if he should send for him. He was apprehended in Upper Thornleigh Street, Bedford Square, where he lived under the name of Thompson. When Wall ascended the scaffold, accompanied by the Rev. Ordinary, there arose three successive shouts from an innumerable populace, the brutal but determined effusion of one common sentiment, for the public indignation had never been so high for very many years. The body, after being dissected at a building in Cowcross Street, was consigned to his relatives upon the payment of fifty guineas to the Philanthropic Society.

By his disconsolate Widow
Mary Franks.

A Mind serene, with useful knowledge fraught,
A Judgment clear, a quick Resource of Thought,
Complacent Manners, and That friendly Zeal
Which prompts to serve, not indolently feel,
Were His. Not Active for himself Alone,
He made the Wants of Every Friend his own,
As dearer Ties, with kindness ever new,
The Father's, Husband's warm affections drew,
His Heart in Quest of Joy ne'er sought to roam,
But found all Comfort center'd in his Home;
There most in life his social Virtues Shone.
Now most lamented, where they best were known.

the 24th Day of March, 1806.

To the Memory of

By his difconsolate Widow, the Mother of his Eleven Children,
As a Memorial of his Worth and her Conjugal Affection.

While on this Spot, still heav'd the pensive Sigh,
Still dropp'd the Tear from sorrowing Friendship's Eye.
The Muse, alas! who late on yonder Stone
Bewails the Father, now bewails the Son!
Bewails that Worth which, ah! lamented Shade!
Cheer'd, soon to sadden, flourish'd, soon to fade.
Yet in Remembrance lives th' accomplish'd Mind,
Where Manly Sense with gent'lest Manners join'd,
Yet still thy Virtues, with reviving Grace,
Shall bloom and flourish in thy numerous Race.
Form'd by Her tender Care, Who thus shall prove,
Her Faith unshaken, unimpair'd her Love.

Belov'd, from earth to life celestial call'd!

That sanctified repose is early thine.
Thee, gentle Anna! in thy mortal days,
For worth angelic Friendship joy'd to praise:
For nature never grac'd an earthly form,
With friendly feelings more divinely warm :
Hence thou art rais'd to fill thy heavenly part,
To which the Saviour train'd thy spotless Heart,
Thy pious spirit in those minds infuse,
That feel in losing thee, how much they lose!

Its rest—its peace.

MARY HUGGINS,
By her devotedly Fond Husband,
Edward Huggins,
of Percy Street, Bedford Square, & Bartholomew Place, Kentish Town,
Died 18th of June, 1835. Aged 27 years.

“This Day is a Day of trouble, for the children are come to the Birth, and there is not strength to bring Forth.”—2nd. Kings, 19 Chap., 3 Verse.

Torn from my widow'd arms, in life's first bloom,
Mary, to thee I consecrate this Tomb,
And vainly strive, in just, but feeble lays,
To paint my anguish, or to speak thy praise.
True Christain worth was thine—the spotless mind,
The graceful form—the manners pure, refined.
Themes such as these demand the poet's art,
But who can strike the lyre—when torture wrings the heart?

Yet tho' left lonely in this vale of tears,
Through the dark vista smiling hope appears!
With placid mien she points to those blest skies,
Where the enfranchis'd spirit never dies!
Where souls united Here by virtue's tie,
Again shall join, in blissful sympathy!
Yes, Mary, tho' thy loss I now deplore,
I feel we yet shall meet on that glad shore,
Where sorrow is unknown—where joy reigns evermore.

Mr. CHARLES GRIGNION, buried November 1, 1810,
aged 94.*

* Mr. Charles Grignion, who flourished in this country as an historical engraver for upwards of half a century, died at Kentish Town, in his 94th year. He had the good fortune to pass a portion of his early youth at Paris, in the study of the celebrated Le Bas; and though his stay with that artist was but short, yet it was of sufficient duration to enable him to imbibe such sound principles as laid the foundation of a style at once energetic and elegant. Having commenced his career in this school, he could draw as well as engrave; and as he possessed that rare talent in his art, the power of giving a free and faithful translation of a picture, the quality and cast of his productions were bold and original. His engraving was not an imitation of Audran, of Edelinck, or of Frey; it was the emanation of a natively-vigorous mind, skilfully directed by a familiar study of the ablest models. His best works not only possess, in an eminent degree, whatever constitutes character and expression (as the print he engraved from one of Hogarth's series of Election Pictures abundantly proves), but they partake of that curiosa felicitas—that happy carelessness of execution, which is as much a characteristic beauty in the style of painting or engraving as it is in that of poetry. As Mr. Grignion advanced in life, his pure, old-fashioned style was superseded by a more imposing—a more finished, but a less intelligent manner. This revolution in engraving threw him into obscurity, and reduced him to poverty; but a few artists and lovers of art, to whom his virtues and his talents were equally dear, by a prompt and efficient subscription, smoothed the path of his declining age, and enabled him to close his days in the bosom of his family, with a contented and grateful mind.

For this Tablet:—

What I was as an Artist
feemed to me
of some Importance
While I lived;
But
What I really was,
as a Believer in Christ Jesus,
is the Only Thing
of Importance to me now!

* Bacon was born in Southwark, November 24, 1740, he was apprenticed to Mr. Crispe, a manufacturer of china, at Lambeth, where he was employed in painting on porcelain. While here he had an opportunity of seeing the models sent by different sculptors to be burnt, and by them was inspired with a strong desire for his future profession. He was unremitting in his diligence, and his progress was so rapid that he obtained nine of the first premiums of the Society for the Encouragement of the Arts. The first of these was for a figure of Peace, in 1758, when he was only eighteen years of age. He was the first person to bring to perfection statues in artificial stone and cement, which has since been brought to great perfection. In 176—, he began to work in marble; and having invented an instrument for transferring the form of the model to marble, he saved a great deal of his time, and brought his instrument to be adopted by other sculptors. In 1769, he obtained from the Royal Academy the first gold medal given by that society, and the year following he was chosen an associate. While modelling the bust of George III. for the hall of Christ Church, Oxford, the King asked him if he had ever been out of the kingdom; and on being answered in the negative, "I'm glad of it," said his Majesty, "you will be the greater honour to it." His execution of this bust gained him the royal patronage, and he was employed in forming another for the university of Göttingen. Among his many works were the statue of Mars, Lord Chatham's monument in Guildhall, a beautiful monument in Bristol Cathedral, to Mrs. Draper, Lord Chatham, in Westminster Abbey, Howard, and Dr. Johnson's in St. Paul's Cathedral, besides a large number of others.

He Wrote—
“Rock of Ages! cleft for me,
Let me hide myself in Thee.”

* Augustus Montague Toplady was born at Farnham, in Surrey, on the 4th of November, 1740. He was the only son of Major Richard Toplady, who died at the Siege of Carthage, shortly after his birth, so that his father was unknown to him. He was educated at Westminster School, where he showed considerable ability. He took his B. A. degree at Trinity College, Dublin. He was ordained in the year 1762. Soon after he was appointed to the living of Blagdon, in Somersetshire; he was then appointed to Venn-Ottery, with Harpford, in Devonshire, a small parish near Sidmouth. This post he exchanged, in 1768, for the rural parish of Broad Hembury, near Honiton, in Devonshire, a living which he retained until his death. In the year 1775, he was compelled through ill-health to come to London and became preacher at Orange Street Chapel, Leicester Square, for a short time. On Sunday, June 14, in the last stage of consumption, and only two months before he died, he ascended his pulpit in Orange Street Chapel, after his assistant had preached, to the astonishment of his people, and gave a short but affecting exhortation on 2 Peter i. 13, 14: "Yea, I think it meet as long as I am in this tabernacle, to stir you up by putting you in remembrance; knowing that shortly I must put off this my tabernacle, even as our Lord Jesus Christ hath showed me." He closed his dying address to these Christians with the following declaration:—"It having been industriously circulated by some malicious and unprincipled persons, that during my present long and severe illness, I expressed a strong desire of seeing Mr. John Wesley, before I die, and revoking some particulars relative to him, which occur in my writings,—Now I do publicly and most solemnly aver that I have not and never had any such intention or desire; and that I most sincerely hope my last hours will be much better employed than in communing with such a man. So certain and satisfied am I of the truth of all that I have ever written, that were I now sitting up in my dying bed, with a pen and ink in my hand, and all the religious and controversial writings I ever published, especially those relating to Mr. John Wesley, and the Armenian controversy, whether respecting fact or doctrine, could be at once displayed to my view, I should not strike out a single line relative to him or them."

Sacred to ANNA CECILLA,
Daughter of Christopher Rhodes, Esq^{re}., of Chatham,
in the county of Kent.

She died Jan. 2nd, 1796, aged 32.

In the first Period of her life
She was the Ornament and Delight of her Family, and the Admiration of all who knew her;
Lovely in her Person, refined in her Sentiments, and amiable in her Temper & Manners.
At the Age of 17, Disease with relentless Hand,
stript off the Pageantry of external Beauty;
But it only served to shew her in the more lovely Dress of Meekness, Submission, and Patience.

At 21 she was seiz'd with an uncommon
Nervous Affection,
which continuing the remaining eleven years of her Life, Bowed down her earthly Fabric and gradually consumed it;

Yet did her Resignation suppress the starting Complaint her Agonies extorted,
And her own Misery was nearly forgotten in a Concern for sympathizing Friends around her.
At length by the gracious Appointment of Heaven
The Disorder that had so long afflicted her,
broke the Bands which held her here,
And she took her Flight to that World
Where every mystery of Providence is explained and "the Inhabitants whereof shall no more say they are sick."

Her mother, whom she never grieved but by her sufferings,

Erected this Monument
To Her beloved Memory.

A life of warfare, such a life was thine ;
With brighter lustre bade thy graces shine.
Injuries forgot, submission to the rod ;
Stedfast reliance on a covenant God ;
Unfailing charity ;—Behold the Fruit
Produced from living faith's perennial root !
Joyful in hope, thy spirit left its earth ;
—And is this death ?—No ! 'tis a heavenly Birth !
Reader ! attend ! the hours yet lent improve !
Thou too press forward to the things Above ;
Thou too with ardour seize the sure Reward
Bought by the precious Blood of Christ, our Lord ;
Through whom,—through whom alone, are sins forgiven ;
Whose faithful followers are the Heirs of Heaven.

To the Memory of
Lieutenant Colonel JOHN HARRIS CRUGER, late of Ruffell Place, Fitzroy Square.
Who Departed this Life June 3rd, 1807, aged 69 Years,
and is interred in the Vault under this Building.
He had been an Inhabitant of the City of New York, in North America, and at the commencement of the Rebellion (disregarding all personal considerations) he took up Arms in support of the Rights of this country. In the course of that war he distinguished himself in the Defence of the important Post of Ninety six, in South Carolina, which he maintained with about 300 Provincial Forces, without Cannon, against a force of 7000 Men, with a numerous Train of Artillery.

He also distinguished himself most brilliantly in the Action of the Eutwas, where he rallied a Portion of the Troops that had left the field, attacked the Enemy, recovered from them the Artillery they had taken,
and pursued them until recalled by superior Orders.

By a rapid and unexampled March, he relieved the Garrison of Fort Augusta, which at the Time was besieged, and in most imminent Danger; And on every Occasion where he could exert himself
he displayed a Zeal, Intrepidity, and good Conduct, which procured him the Approbation and Friendship
of his Commander in Chief, the late Marquis Cornwallis, and all the Officers of Distinction with whom he served.

To his Gallantry and good Conduct as a Soldier, were added every Virtue that could adorn a Christian and a Gentleman in social life, which has been fully testified by the Feelings expressed at his Death by all those to whom he was known.

This short Memorial is placed here by his truly disconsolate Widow.

Blessed are the Pure in heart for they shall see God.

Erected by a Sister in Memory of her Beloved ANNA CECILIA,
Daughter of Christopher Rhodes, Esq^r., of Chatham,
In the county of Kent. She Departed
This Life June 2nd, 1796, aged 32. Her remains Were deposited in the 42 Vault of this chapel.
Distinguished by a fine Understanding, and a Most amiable Disposition of Heart,
She was the Delight of her Parents, and the Admiration of all who knew her.
At the Age of 17, the Small Pox stripped off
all the Bloom of youthful Beauty,
And being followed by a dreadful Nervous Disorder,
withered those fair Prospects of earthly Happiness
Which were expected from her uncommon Affection,
• sensibility, and Tenderness.
After enduring this afflictive Dispensation many years
When it was difficult to say which exceeded, her Sufferings or her Submission,
Her Friends' Concern for her Sorrows,
Or their admiration of her Patience;
She was released by Death, and received into that World where there shall be no more Pain,
But God Himself shall wipe away Tears
From every Eye.
Alas! how vain are feeble Words to tell
What once she was, and why I lov'd so well;
None else but He who form'd the Heart can know
How great her Worth or how extreme my Woe!
Blest Calv'ry, on thy crimson Top I see,
Suff'rings and Death with Life and Love agree;
Justice severe and smiling Mercy join,
And thro' the Gloom we see the Glory shine.

In the xxvth vault of this chapel,
Are deposited the remains of HENRY O' HARA,
(of Upper Eaton Street, Pimlico), Esq^r.,
Who Departed this Life, the XIIIth of August, MDCCCIV, Aged LIII years.

Fix'd is the term, to all the race on Earth;
And such the hard condition of our birth;
No force can death resist: no flight can save,
All fall alike, the fearful and the brave.

Mrs. EULIELIA O' HARA,
Died the XXIII of February, MDCCCXXXIII,
Aged XCIII years.
Thrice Happy Christians who when time is o'er Shall meet in Realms of Bliss to part no more.

Blest shade, this tomb thy widowed husband rears,
In tribute to thy worth and goodness due,
Which through the vista of full thirty years,
Return in grateful retrospect to view.
Thine were the active virtues that adorn,
The child, the wife, the mother, and the friend,
These in their seasons from life's early morn,
Graced thy career to its lamented end.
But while our feelings own one common grief,
In losing thee, our faith the hope supplies,
That He who gave thy anguished frame relief,
Transferred thy sainted spirit to the skies.
